LIEUTENANT FRED WAMPLER,

Commanding Officer, Organized Surface Division 9-51.

NATIONAL RESERVE NAVAL RESERVE WEEK

COMMANDER JAMES M. CLINE,

Representative of District Director Naval Reserve, Ninth Naval District.

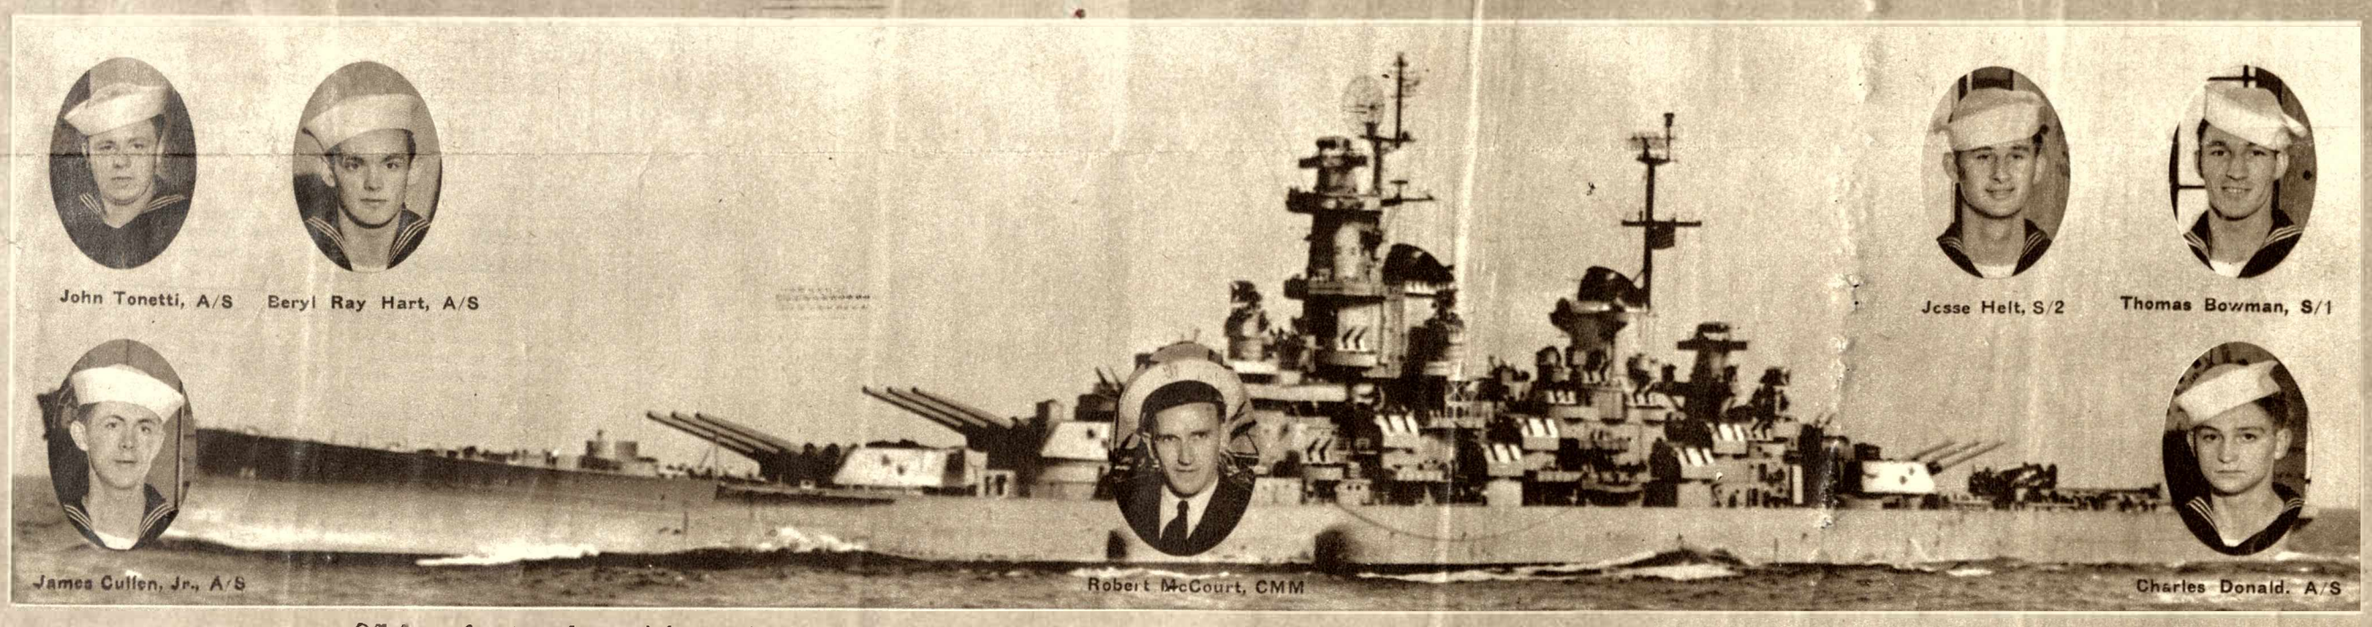
OPERATION NAVAL RESERVE

WEEK of MAY 18th to MAY 25th

THE NAVAL RESERVE AND TERRE HAUTE

HERE'S WHAT THE NAVAL RESERVE MEANS TO TERRE HAUTE: A Naval Building constructed at the cost of approximately $140,000 as a Naval Training Center. An annual payroll amounting to $50,000 for members of the Organized Reserve. The installation of equipment for education and training amounting to approximately $200,000. A recreation center for all members. The center will include a galley, dance floor, enlisted lounge, officer's lounge, library and various shops for those who are interested in a hobby or handicraft. Consideration for our local boys in case Universal Military Training is adopted. This center will play an integral part in the program established for such training. Being associated with the Organized Reserve would shorten period of training that is proposed at the present time. Guard the Peace by staying home in Terre Haute in the Naval Reserve.

U. S. S. WISCONSIN



Off for a fourteen-day training cruise in the Caribbean Sea. Local members, shown above, depart on one of the Navy's newest Battleships—the Wisconsin, with a displacement of 52,000 tons, for a short tour of duty, leaving New York on April 2 and returning May 10, 1947

NATIONAL NAVAL RESERVE WEEK OBSERVED HERE MAY 18-25.

Keeping its members abreast of scientific and technical developments in specific rate groups is one of the foremost aims of the U. S. Naval Reserve. Young men who enter the local Organized Naval Reserve are offered military training, education, recreation and advancement in rate with pay. At the same time, they remain civilians. Pictures on this page show some of the activities of the Terre Haute reserve division and indicate how strong the unit has grown since its organization last year. Temporary headquarters of the division are in the Terre Haute Y.M.C.A., but plans already have been made for construction of a huge new Terre Haute Naval Armory.

COMMANDING OFFICER, LT. W. W. TALLEY, JR., electronics warfare unit, instructs Jack Bacon, CETM, to operate division's radio equipment.

ORGANIZED SURFACE DIVISION 9-51, with a complement of over 200 men, assemble as unit at regular Monday night meeting.
